FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

From the Walla Walla Statesman of the 22d we have the following:

SELLED NEAR DEATH.

A Mrs. Clark residing at Waitsburg in this county came to a sudden death on Saturday last by taking an overdose of medicine. At first she was supposed to have committed suicide but on further investigation it was ascertained the fatal dose had been taken by mistake. Mrs. C was an estimable woman and her death is greatly regretted.

THREE COUNTIES.

An act was passed by the late Legislature organizing the county of Yakima and appointing county officers. This has been done twice before but the officers appointed have never qualified. The present list it is said will enter upon the duties of the offices and set the machinery of the county in motion. The Yakima valley is of late being brought into notice as a stock raising country in which regard it possesses superior advantages. There are at present several large bands of stock in that valley and we are told there will be a large number driven there from the lower country the coming spring.

COAL.

Rumor has been busy during the week circulating a report that a coal vein had been discovered somewhere not far from this city. Charley Brooks is said to be the fortunate discoverer. Specimens of what appear to be the croppings of coal are exhibited in proof of the statement, and are a sufficient evidence of its truthfulness. When a proper length of time has elapsed for a thorough prospecting of the ledge we presume the discoverer will give the public the result of his investigations and make known the locality of the ledge. In the meantime we shall hope that the vein will prove to be a good one. A good coal mine anywhere in the valley will certainly prove a mine of wealth to its owner.

IRON.

We have elsewhere referred to the discovery of a coal mine within the limits of this city. We have to add that a gentleman whose statement can be relied upon, assures us that he knows of an iron vein within twenty miles of Walla Walla, and that it is his intention to arrange for its working in the course of the coming season. With a supply of iron and coal, and the finest agricultural valley in the country, it is not too much to say that we have a promising future before us. Messrs. Phillips & Co. have just completed the erection of an iron foundry at the lower end of town and with the advantage of an abundant supply of the raw material, they will be able to supply the castings and iron work for all the quartz and other mills in the country beyond us. In this way an immense amount of money that has hitherto been sent abroad will be retained at home and serve to enrich our people.

FROM FORT SHEPHERD.

A private letter addressed to Dr. Shell, and dated Fort Shepherd, January 9th, furnishes the following items: We have new diggings on a tributary of the Kootenai River within 47 miles of this place. About thirty claims have been recorded on Forty-Nine Creek, but the stream has not been thoroughly tested. The discoverers took out $45 whilst prospecting. Another stream a little below Forty Nine prospects well, and so I think we may expect a small mining camp up there somewhere. A man named King was drowned whilst running a riffle on the Kootenai. No particulars. Another man named George Tinline, was found dead on the Salmon River trail. He had been out trapping and had starved to death, at least we think so, as he had not an ounce of food on him when found. By letters on his person it was ascertained that he has a brother living at Union, Union county, Oregon. We have had a very mild winter, no frost to hurt, and only four inches of snow.

ADDRESS TO THE VOTERS OF WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

The following appeal has been addressed to the Union voters of Washington Territory by the Union Central Committee:

As the time for the meeting of the Union Convention

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 28, 1867.

Men who did not "Obey their State."

Most of the rebels, according to their own story, believed in the doctrine of State allegiance, and so "went with their State." This is the only plea they set up in their defence. On this ground, also, their conduct finds justification in the eyes of their political friends, the Copperheads of the North. But there were many prominent rebels who did not "go with their State." The annals of the rebellion make no mention of the secession of Missouri or Kentucky. Yet "General" Sterling Price was a citizen of Missouri, and "General" John C. Breckinridge a citizen of Kentucky. These eminent Democratic citizens went out of the Union, though their States remained in. The Copperheads tell us that the citizens of States which seceded are not guilty of treason, though they fought against the General Government. But there were many men whose States refused to secede, who nevertheless took up arms and fought both against their States and the Government of the Union. Will some Copperhead oracle explain how, on their principles, these men can be cleared of the guilt of treason? The citizen of Georgia is said to be wholly justified, because in taking up arms he merely obeyed his State, which had the fratchaim upon his allegiance. The citizen of Missouri or Kentucky who entered the rebel service, not only did not obey his State, but fought against her. If it was a generous act in Robert E. Lee to take up arms at the call of his "noble mother," Virginia, what is to be said of the conduct of John C. Breckinridge in turning his murderous arms against the bosom of his "noble mother" Kentucky? On Confederate and Copperhead principles, one would be the grateful and generous son; the other, the unnatural and guilty matricide. But Confederates and Copperheads forget their own teaching, and think Breckinridge and Lee equally honorable and equally meritorious. Their logic thus confutes itself. Their approbation of the conduct of those rebels who fought against their own States, as well as against the General Government, destroys utterly the defense they set up for the others, viz: that in taking part with the rebellion, they merely responded to the call of their respective States, and are therefore not guilty of treason. On their principles, Price, Breckinridge, Preston, and others from Missouri, Kentucky and Maryland, are the greatest of criminals, the worst of offenders.

"General" William Preston, like "General" Breckinridge, is a Kentuckian who did not go with his State. But he led a rebel army against her to devastate her fair fields, sack her cities and despoil her citizens. "General" William has returned home since the war, and now modestly offers himself as a candidate for Governor of his beloved State. He declares himself in favor of a general amnesty, the magnanimous statesman that he is. A day or two ago in referring to this sublime instance of disintorested magnanimity, we remarked that all our State prison convicts are in favor of an amnesty, too. At this, the Herald, ever ready to defend all rebels, whether they "followed their State" or not, waxes exceedingly wroth. For any one to say such things about good Democrats, touches that paper in a very sore place. It flies to the defence of "General" Preston, and indignantly declares that our remark concerning him is "only worthy of the paper which devotes columns to vilifying the character" of the father of the Democratic party.

Now, we think it must be allowed that this remark is not complimentary to Jefferson. It associates his name with rather disreputable company. In the Herald's opinion, the atrocity of our remark about "General" Preston is equalled by nothing but our articles exposing the real character of the father of its party. To say such severe things about that good Democrat, "General" Preston, is quite as outrageous as to "vilify" Mr. Jefferson. For was not the "General" engaged in the arduous work of maintaining Jeffersonian principles? True, he did not obey his State; but then he was a rebel, and that gives him character with all who revere the memory of the man who prayed that the country might be visited by a rebellion at least as often as every twenty years.

If Copperhead and Confederate principles were logically carried out, we should witness some lively scenes of hanging in three or four of the States of the Union. On their principles, all who went into the rebel army from States which did not secede, are guilty of treason, and no others are.

The following is from the Columbia South Carolinian. It is in the genuine "Erebus vein. Here we have the spectacle of traitors accusing patriots of "treason," and denouncing "bloody justice" upon those who with unparalleled magnanimity, refused to mete out "bloody justice" to actual traitors:

"Looking to Washington, one would imagine that hell had been transferred to that point, and we had exchanged a deliberative Congress for Pandemonium! Let all the Union-loving, patriotic, God-fearing men, North and South, wait, watch, and stand firm! We shall yet crush the strong-handed faction of rump treason, and mete out a bloody justice upon its advocates. Be men, and bide your time; sleep upon your arms, ready to strike gloriously for liberty and your country! 'Live, the republic; perish, all its enemies!'"

The Copperhead papers make a great ado over the discovery that there are fewer prisoners in Southern than in Northern State Prisons. There are two reasons for this. In the first place, all the Southern prisons were emptied to get men to fight for the Confederacy; and, in the second place, not half the criminals in the South are ever brought to punishment. If the instigators and perpetrators of the outrages at Memphis, New Orleans, &c., had their deserts, the Southern prisons would not stand tenantless as they do now.

Jefferson Davis, instead of being a State prisoner, is rather enthroned in state at Fortress Monroe. The last performance is the formal presentation of a cane made of the wood of the rebel ram Manassas, and his speech in reply complimenting the donors upon their "patriotism," by which devotion to "the lost cause" is, of course, implied.

The real estate of New York city is valued at $478,094,934; of Boston at $225,707,215, and of Philadelphia at only $160,000,000. The Philadelphia Press says that the property of that city is shamefully undervalued, which would seem to be true when its assessed value is compared with that of the property of the smaller city of Boston.

Seven hundred and sixty-six loyal men of Arkansas have sent a memorial to the House of Representatives, asking for the abolition of A. Johnson's bogus government in that State, and for authority to be conferred on the loyal people to organize a new government.

The lines of railroad now in operation in England measure 13,289 miles in length. In one year the passenger and freight trains on these roads travel as great a distance as from the earth to the sun and half way back.

The foreign lumber trade of Portland, Maine, for 1866, amounted to about 14,000,000 feet. The amount sent to domestic ports was enormously great.

Illinois has purchased from Mrs. Douglas the lot of ground on which the remains of Stephen A. Douglas were buried, paying therefor the sum of $25,000.

Joseph Webster and his wife, of Belchertown, Massachusetts, are veterans in the matrimonial service, the one being ninety-four and the other ninety-two years of age. They have been married seventy-two years and are getting to feel quite well acquainted with each other.

LATE EASTERN NEWS.

Barnum Nominated for Congress.

HARTFORD, Feb. 14.—The Republicans have nominated P. T. Barnum for Congress in the Fourth District.

Arrival of the Informer on Surratt.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Henry St. Marie, the witness by whose evidence the identity of Surratt, the alleged accomplice of Booth, Atzerot and Paine, was determined, arrived at this port yesterday, in the steamer N. Lawrence, and went direct to Washington by the evening train.

Quantrell's Guerrillas Hang a Union Man.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 19.—A special dispatch to the Journal says a mob, composed of the remains of Quantrell's guerrillas, broke open Mr. Currie's house, at Parkville, and seized and hung Currie. He had been tried for stealing horses with which to escape from the rebels at the battle of Perryville.

Kentucky Protests.

FRANKFORT, (Ky.) Feb. 17.—The house passed, by a vote of 59 against 15, a joint resolution, stating that the people are unalterably opposed to the movements in Congress to place the people of the Southern States under military despotism, contrary to the spirit of the Union, and subversive of the principles whereon the Government is founded and they here enter their solemn protest against all such Congressional action.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Canadian Confederation.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A bill for the Confederation of British North America only embraces the Canadas, with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Exile of the King Consort of Spain.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Madrid dispatches say the King Consort has been exiled from Spain on charges of plotting for a regency of the kingdom.

STATE ITEMS.

A dispatch from Jacksonville of the 20th February, says: The Rogue River Woolen Manufacturing Company have to-day filed their articles of incorporation. Their place of business is Ashland, Jackson county, Oregon. The capital stock is $30,000. The incorporators are James T. Glenn, R. B. Hargadine, John E. Ross, J. B. Wrisley, Jas. Thornton, John H. Walker, J. B. McCall, and M. Hanley.

FROM MONTANA.

From the Montana Democrat of February 7th we glean the following:

The election in Virginia City, February 4th, resulted in the election of Marks Marx, the Democratic nominee, by a majority of 74 votes over Capt. L. C. Lee, Republican, the nominee of the People's Ticket. But it turns out the Mayor is ineligible—not having resided in the city twelve months preceding the election. Another election was called for February 18th.

The amount of taxes and licenses collected by Gen. Andrew Leech, County Treasurer of Madison, during the last quarter, amounts to the sum of $30,000.

The registered debt of Madison county is now only about $20,000, and when Gen. Leech went into office it was nearly $70,000.

The Treasurer of Meagher county paid into the Territorial Treasury, the first week in February, $700 in Treasury notes, which, added to $1,300 heretofore paid, makes $2,000 received from that county.

Congress has passed a bill appropriating the net proceeds of 1867 and 1868 of the internal revenue of Idaho and Montana, and several other Territories, for public buildings. This is extremely liberal, and will insure for Montana the building of a capitol and penitentiary.

The "Usurper."

The Detroit Post thus ably dissects that portion of the President's veto message accompanying the District Suffrage Bill, which argues that Congress is liable to usurp authority belonging to the Executive and Judicial branches of the Government. It is a conclusive reply to the pettifogging of the veto message:

The last half of the message argues that the Executive Department of the Government, being ruled by only one man, is not liable to usurp authority! That the Judicial department, being a court of law, is the weakest branch of the Government—a mere innocent babe—not at all subject to the temptations of ambition, and to be protected and fostered, rather than jealously suspected of usurping powers not belonging to it! But that the Legislative Department immediately representing the people is exceedingly dangerous and ambitious, and liable to usurp power! That is, the people, through Congress, which is their immediate agent, are very likely to usurp their own rights and powers! The judiciary, he says, is sure not to usurp power, because "it is never brought into contact with the people by constant appeals, solicitations and private intercourse which belong to all other departments of the Government." Being removed from the corrupt influence of the people, the Supreme Court is secure from ambition! If the people could approach it, its virtue would be in danger, because the people are so desperately depraved that they might seduce it into usurping their rights and overthrowing their liberties. It is well known that the people never fail to beg the department to set up a tyranny over them!

The Executive department, especially under Mr. Johnson's administration, is secure against the temptations of ambitious usurpation; notwithstanding it is exposed to the corrupting influence of the people, because, first, of its superior virtue; and, second, because it is watched. "One hundred and seventy-three despots would surely be as oppressive as one," says Mr. Johnson, "and little will it avail us that they were chosen by ourselves." Considering that they cannot be watched as easily as one, perhaps they may be worse than one. These "one hundred and seventy-three despots," constituting Congress, says Mr. Johnson, quoting an argument from Story, made for another purpose, and applying it to show that Congress may set up an usurpation, "have the pride as well as the power of numbers. They are easily moved, and steadily moved, by the strong impulse of popular feeling and popular odium. They obey without reluctance, the wishes and will of the majority [of the people] for the time being." Therefore they are doubly dangerous. If they didn't "obey the wishes and will of the majority" of the people, they would be less likely to usurp the liberties of the people; but, because they obey the people, they are likely to become despots over the people. Mr. Johnson don't "obey the wishes and will of the majority" of the people; because the Executive department is in no danger of usurping the rights of the people. This logic and conclusion must convince all candid minds.

AN ARCH OF IRON AND COAL.—When Queen Victoria paid her recent visit to Wolverhampton, England, to dedicate the statue to Prince Albert, her cortege passed under six triumphal arches on their way through the principal street. The chief of these arches was one of iron and coal, to which the Earl of Dudley contributed twenty-five tons from one of his famous collieries, some of it being hewn into blocks of two tons each. There was also an arch composed of hardware and Japanned goods, among which coal scuttles were quite conspicuous.

SUCCESSFUL BURGLARY—STOWELL, CHAMBERLAIN & Co's. SAFE BLOWN OPEN AND ROBBED.—Our town was startled on Friday morning by the discovery of a great burglary in the Banking Office of Messrs Stowell, Chamberlain & Co. The safe was a double one made by Lewis Lillie & Son, of the largest size, weighing many thousand pounds. The burglars obtained an entrance into the office by prying open one of the windows with a jimmy. In the lower left hand corner of the right hand outer door of the safe, which was two inches thick, a hole was drilled, through which powder was introduced. It was blown open, separating the outside from the bolts and inside casing, rendering it a complete wreck. The lower hinges of both doors were broken off. They next attacked the inside safe which was two feet high, extending the width and depth of the inside of the main safe. This safe was one and a half inches thick, made with folding doors. They drilled another hole through the right hand door in nearly the same point they had on the outside safe, blowing open both doors. This gave them access to the money and bonds, amounting to twenty-five thousand dollars, which they carried off. The larger portion of this belonged to special depositors. They also took valuable papers belonging to the firm, leaving in their flight a bag of gold and silver, also a hundred dollar bill. The safe was made to order by Mr. Lillie, of chilled iron, and was supposed to be burglar-proof, as it was a double safe, one inside the other, with Lillie's combination locks on the outside and inside doors. No trace of the burglars has been discovered. They came well prepared with jimmies, drills, gunpowder, &c. The clerk of the bank did not leave there until twelve o'clock at night. The explosion was heard about four in the morning, showing they were expeditious in their work. feb14tln

RAILROADS IN NEW YORK.—There are many schemes for a railroad in New York among others is a steam railroad under ground. While the people in New York are in a query which railroad to favor, the people of Oregon favor KOHN & FISHEL with their custom, which they will always reciprocate by selling the best and most fashionable clothing, gents' furnishing goods, etc. for the least money.

THE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION CONVENED—WEDNESDAY—41 9 o'clock Court opened, jury called and examination commenced.

Bird, Eyner and Hornstrom called by defendant, and sworn.

Direct Examination.—I know the defendant. I gave him a piece of paper with my name on it in my hand; I think I gave it to him on the 22d day of January. I also saw him on the 17th inst. in this city. Between those days I did not see him.

Cross Examination.—On the 17th I saw him at nearly noon; he said he came from Zimmerman's place. It was raining very hard. He came to my place early. I gave him the writing because he wanted to go to the mines, and when he came back he would want to see me; and I would be moved. I knew him in December before he went to Zimmerman's; he said he had a good claim in the mines and would probably make $ 000 out of it.

Mr. Turner Called —I know the defendant. I keep the California House; the defendant came to my house on the 23d day of December; I saw him the 16th or 17th of January in a saloon.

Plaintiff Calls Dr. Hartley —The gun was in shooting order on Friday, the 18th of January; was talking about swapping it for a shot gun. I examined and tried it and it was in order; I subshot the gun before that.

Cross Examination.—It was along in the afternoon. I did not shoot it off that day; I had shot it three weeks before; I did not snap a cap on it I set it twice I wanted to see if it still remained in good order; it was the day before I saw defendant and the old man together; I did not swear on my direct examination that I had not seen the old man for several days before that gun would not go down when cocked if it was not set, but by putting the finger behind the trigger.

Powell.—Would it be possible for the gun lying across his arm to take up the ball took? [Objected to as an opinion, and that the jury are the proper parties to judge.]

Dr. Poppleton recalled by a juror.—A ball entered the back and came out a little under the right eye

Question.—Is there anything it would strike while passing through the head, that would change its progress?

Answer.—No, sir; there are some bones forming plates whichare very thin, and to old persons they may be worn out, but there was nothing to change the direction of the ball as it struck it direct. The outer bone was not fractured below the lid of the eye The supra and infra orbitar plates were both carried away If the gun had been on a level the ball would have glanced upward.

Evidence closed.

THE ARGUMENT.

Mr. Bill for the State.—The evidence is principally circumstantial. No person saw the man killed. That the man Recke was killed there is no doubt. As to the way you will have to determine. To form conclusions on circumstantial evidence and follow the chain, particular attention must be paid and landmarks made from which the mind must work. Two persons very seldom tell the same story. There is little conflict in dates; no difference between the State and Defence. They are of so strong a character they impress themselves upon the memory. Every man recollects what he saw and his acts, because the circumstances led all to believe he had come to his death by murder. They will remember the facts as long as they live. Do they believe the murder and robbery was committed by defendant. You would be likely to make some discrepancy in dates unless your attention should be particularly called to them. If you cannot say that any individual is correct about these minor particulars, you must find some facts to base the odds of circumstances upon, and then there are facts distinguishable between, some differences between the 13th to the 24th of January C H Recke was killed at his house. Then you must see—the manner of his death. At the inquest it was found that he had been killed by a ball entering his head—entering the back of his head—and by one ball in the right eye. Two persons had been sitting at a table in the house. At that time of finding the body it was dragged up in the corner behind the door. The board and basket did not hide the legs entirely from the window The body had been dragged and the bloody trail covered over; an attempt made to hide the marks of the murder. There were things in time of [illegible] which lead to the conclusion that the old man was shot while eating. The other plate was as though it had been eat off of, and the circumstances are so strong that we must believe it natural for any man, to suppose that they were both eating meals at that house, and that one of the men eating committed the crime. Could the ball taking the direction it did, burning the hair of the head and entering the fir[illegible] board that depth, could it have changed its direction? An examination of the wound shows that it could not have been changed; and if any of you have had any experience in gunning you will know that it would not have changed its course. If the gun had been upon a level the coors would have been collapsed and the flesh would have been lacerated. If a man's head was four feet from the ground it would have been impossible for the gun to be lying on the floor. To most have held it up and the gun must have inclined down ward. If the ball was five feet 8 inches in height, and according to all principles of natural philosophy, the ball would have come up and made a lacerated wound. Under the circumstances it must have been by some person holding the gun up high, and not from the floor. It would seem to be held near the man's head to have burned the hair within six inches of the man's head. And if it was [illegible] can you believe that in such a position the gun was discharged accidently If from the circumstances, you believe it was done purposely and feloniously, with malice aforethought, then it will be deliberate murder, and if so then the defendant is arraigned. Who was the person who committed this act? The defendant had been working for Mr. Zimmerman a few days before, and on the 16th he came to Portland and received $4 10. He said he had enough money to pay for a pair of boots. On the 17th of January he came to Portland; also, on the 18th, he was seen on his way and enquiring the way to old man Recke's. And he knows of the fact that the old man had the money. On the 17th, he went from the city of Portland to him at the house. On the 18th he on [illegible] the way to Recke's. On the 17th he is in Portland. On the 18th Dr. Hartley visits old man Recke and sees him there at Recke's; while they talk about trading a gun. On the 19th he passed by and saw the deceased and the defendant at the door, looking over the books of the old man. Now it makes no difference if the day alleged in the indictment is not correct. Defendant also got away, and on the 22d he came in to Portland and is arrested here; sells certain property to Mr. Bloom; the property is recognized as that of the deceased, and he [illegible] money which he spent at the Dutch House, and which was found in his pocket. There is no doubt in my mind that it was for the money and these goods that he killed the man. Now, after his examination in the Recorder's Court, he [illegible] to officer Waspi that he took the money and [illegible], and that he sold these things for $75. His own [illegible] is, if not made under the influence, ought to be the strongest facts against him, and it is not a man's own interest—will make them falsely. In a criminal case, where he can gain anything by it, there is but one [illegible] he thinks it impossible for it to escape, and feeling guilty before God and man, I say it is the strongest kind of evidence. Confessions may be false, and when they are made under [illegible] and persuading, such have occurred, but the chances are more than one million to one that a man [illegible] his guilty. You have had the testimony before you. I do not intend to detain you longer. The [illegible] and experience of these witnesses is before you. You have it all, and finally you have his confession of committing the act. But this last is expected to be explained away by the testimony of Sheriff Pember, and that such stories are not true. As a rule, they always make explanations favorable to themselves. An illustration is seen in the case of a Chinese [illegible] in the last term of the court, who told a story about getting drunk in self defence. Who would believe that? So this defendant told his story, that the old man told him to take the gun while on the [illegible] gun's after some vegetables, and that with the gun on his arm and he was trying the trigger, the gun went off and shot the old man. They show that he was in town on the 17th and on the 22d, and that he pointed out where the property was, and that on the day he was in a hawdy house; but that little space between those times and at the time at which the murder was [illegible] They have no proof as to where he was, so that they must account for every moment of his time. Those dates to prove an alibi. Could it be done? In order to prove murder it must be shown that there was deliberate intention For what purpose [illegible] into the old man's business, looking over the books, inquiring the way to his house? How was the gun fired? was it in the way, or the position of the gun such that it could have been under a sudden impulse? Then this man must have deliberated upon it. In a paltry eighty dollars and the property of the old man a sufficient inducement for him to commit the crime? If a man kill another and acknowledges that he took the property from his pocket, then it is strong evidence that it was the inducement for him to kill He killed the old man deliberately and in cold blood for the purpose of getting these paltry goods. This matter is in your hands and that of the judge. If you find that the facts are true, you must not regard the consequences that will follow, to this defendant. It is nothing to you, and you must not be influenced by the feelings of his neighbors, or that he was bold to answer before the recorder, or [illegible] the grand jury. Found in the possession of the property, the question of fact regardless of who may hang for it or who suffer, You should recollect that a man who will, for those few trinkets and the $80, commit this crime, is a dangerous man to the community. It is no trouble to prosecute this man. I shall not trouble you further, gentlemen of the jury.

Mr. C. A. Bulph for the defense: This is an important case and I confess to you that it is with a feeling that the defendant is to be tried, not from any rumors, but from the facts he is to be tried, by a jury to whom he may trust his life. We are to examine the circumstances and find whether the defendant is guilty of murder. Circumstantial evidence is the most dangerous of all kinds of evidence, and this is a case of that kind. The evidence is that the defendant and deceased were at this place and [illegible] about the same time, that they both worked for Mr. Zimmerman, and that the defendant, when he was discharged, had $1 10; and that he required the way to the old man's home We have not denied that the defendant went there. On the contrary, as the plaintiff's own witness says, we declare that he killed the old man, but that it was accidental And that is not all; the circumstances at the house show that the old man fell down and laid there some time and was afterward moved. Then again, are you satisfied that the man making the shot took aim at the deceased? The witnesses show that this is not a safe gun and that it must have been raised high and in front of the party Could he have taken aim, or is the statement true that at the time they had been eating the old man told him to go? He takes up the gun, he raises the cock to examine the gun, and it slips off and shoots the old man; that he then goes off, returns and takes the money, becomes to Portland where he would have been arrested and must expect to be, also goes to St. Helens, and in the public streets This defendant and the deceased and Zimmerman are all Germans, and when discharged is it not more reasonable for him to go to the German's than anywhere else; for him to stay there and live and eat? When you determine whether this was a wilful crime, take the fact of this being a dangerous gun, and no uncertainty, the position of the person, direction of the ball, and could it have been wilful murder, drawn the old man in the corner and goes to town and to drown his sorrow gets drunk and goes where oth[illegible] would not go. But that we are free from all intentional guilt in the matter, from the facts, the position and the condition of the things, you are to judge. I will not receive you. I believe that this is the true theory of the case and that the defendant is not guilty as charged. Take these into consideration the fact that they were friends, [illegible] and acquaintances. Look at the object which would be likely to induce the act and all the circumstances, and in making your conclusion, remember that it is better that ninety-nine guilty men escape than one innocent man be punished

E. M. Cronan—Gentlemen of the jury, the responsibility resting upon the counsel and jury is almost fearful from the facts and the law. Under the law to find whether from the facts [illegible] is guilty, you are the exclusive judges of the fact upon determination is final The errors of the Court must be remedied by an appeal, but you [illegible] final determination of the facts Have you a conscientious opinion that you will transmit your fellow man to death upon circumstantial evidence? It is dangerous, very dangerous, to rely and find beyond a reasonable doubt with cases in which upon circumstantial evidence and confessions convicts [illegible] when the parties were not guilty We have at all times claimed that we killed the man, but that it was by accident At the time when they were pulling stumps they [illegible] the agreement by which he went to work for the [illegible] And on the 21st, while they were at the table, the old man told him to go over to Zimmerman's and get some vegetables and take the gun with him that he might kill some game that he took the gun and while [illegible] the rock it went off and killed the old man; that he then ran out conducted back again and took the money, went to Portland and got drunk and went into a bawdy house We want what we say that all the facts should be brought out because we know that the defendant must have had the gun in that position and thought it was strange He did not [illegible] naturally take such an opinion stretch himself up in that manner. Do you believe it? Never He would have taken aim and deliberately killed him, and not in such a manner Could he not have taken the things very easily if he had wished? And is the sum of eighty dollars a sufficient inducement for him to commit a murder and run away? Instead of taking the eighty dollars and those things and getting out of the country, he came here and got drunk. He is poor and never had the money to spend With a man kill another for the purpose of getting that money to spend? No Again, he says, "I ran away, for I thought they would kill me," and he knows if he showed [illegible] would take the money and came to Portland. Is there any reason for his absconding? See Witnesses show where the blood was and that he must have laid there some time, and that afterwards he must have returned and got the money [illegible] ignorant man may not be expected to deliver himself up as a reasonable and intelligent man might But he went back and took the money, he came here, was seen here Wednesday night and went to the house Would he not have made other use of that money if he had been guilty of deliberate murder? Now, he was found within 25 miles of Portland, would he not have attempted to get away? He stayed here till he saw the hand-bills and then he left. He was at his decision. He had been so overcome by his memories that he tells those circumstances of the death, and as told they agree with the circumstantial evidence in this case In regard to the evidence, this man says that he got from the old man That is correct, and $80 as claimed by the prosecution. With you rests the life of this defendant It remains for you to determine whether this man is guilty It is a great responsibility one which you might well wish to shirk If he was carefully careless with that gun, he may be punished. He did not [illegible] necessarily to let go free, for he did take the old man's money And if you are not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that this man is guilty he must be discharged In after years you may not have pleasant memories You may think that perhaps it is true, and do not these facts raise a doubt whether he was guilty? You should remember in your direction in my duty if I find he is not guilty, for I believe that he is not guilty. Again, he told the Sheriff even before he was brought here about the particular condition of the trigger, and your examination shows that it is so. You know there is among public opinion against this defendant. Will you, knowing the circumstances stand between him and that public opinion? If there is a reasonable doubt, you must acquit him

M. F. Malkey—In this case we have no plan arranged for a prosecution We place the facts before you I do not desire a conviction unless you [illegible] under the evidence. If you can satisfy yourselves that he is not guilty as charged, I hope you will do that, and if guilty of any minor grade of crime you will so find. And if I mistake any of the testimony, it will be unintentional. If it stated that this defendant acted like an innocent man; that he delivered himself up to the officer in St Helens on the 5th of February, in fact or virtually, but is that the fact? The truth is, he was secreted, and not till driven in by hunger was he found, and are his confessions those of an innocent man? Evidence that he is the man who killed old man Recke Here he says guilty of falsehood, and the next day he makes his confession. States that he walked around behind the old man, had the gun upon his arm and it went off and killed him Is it probable that they were at dinner at 10 o clock in the day? In order to get the range that the gun must have been in a very strange position for the gun, and there is no doubt that his confession was a falsehood. But that he killed the old man is so. If he stated a falsehood one day it is reasonable to suppose that he would state another. There is a misstatement of testimony by the counsel about the position of the gun. He stated that we had failed to hear that he had more than $9 10 So that a John Bird says he had $8 and had the rings on, so that he had other money.

We first wish to show that a murder has been committed, and that old man Recke was murdered on or about the 19th of January last past, and from the nature of the circumstances, no doubt that this defendant committed the crime. I consider that circumstantial evidence is the strongest kind of testimony, and that witnesses may commit perjury, but circumstances cannot lie, and the train must show the truth; Our statutes provide that the precise time need not be stated, to that it comes within the Statute of Limitation. It has been shown that on the 21st of January he had been dead ten days, by the coroner. He says that the appearance was that these persons had been eating, that near the seat in the [illegible] there was a pool of blood and things, and that near the door there was another pool of blood, and that the man has been dragged, and that he had been shot in the back of the head, that a basket had been sat by the man's legs, that blankets had been placed over the blood, that the murderer placed the [illegible] concealing the crime, and that he had money. This, then, shows that some man has been guilty of the crime of murder. There was clearly an intent, as is seen from every circumstance. You must be convinced beyond a doubt that this crime of murder was committed. Who then committed this crime? The defendant. He has the different act, but did not commit murder. There must then be some circumstances notwithstanding these confessions. The property was discovered on account of his statements, and such statements may always be taken and they are correct; he told where almost things were. We have shown, gentlemen that these watches and rings were the personal property of old man Recke, and it is identified as being in his possession only a few days previous to his death, and other witnesses see it in the possession of this defendant; some before he sold and others to whom he sold it and identified the property in court as the same that the defendant brought to her store and sold. If he was in possession then there is no doubt that he robbed the old man. Again, he knew that the five tenzlies had been given to him and seeks the acquaintance and enquires the way to his home, and was seen there. Had an opportunity to do it and he did it, and everything goes to show it The law is that the jury are not compelled to take all of the confession. They may take all that is reasonable, but what is unreasonable may be rejected, and the statement is to be taken for what it is worth So much only as the circumstances prove is to be taken as true, and that only. It is natural for him to make confessions excusing himself, and to give reasons why he did so. Everything shows it was premeditated, it could have been no accident. Could you infer from the evidence that there was any accident? The old man sat at the plate at the northwest corner, a man sat on the same seat and they took the same gun. [There a remark was lost.] The gun was not tricky; they had tried it the day before the inquest and it was in good order. You must take the gun as it was at the time and not as it is now. Over a month ago. The ball hit the head square, and there was no one to interfere with the course of the ball and the head must have been six feet from the wall and four feet from the floor; and when the gun was within six inches of his head, it must have been held high up on the shoulder. The tall ranged downward in going in it would be four inches at one foot, and if within one foot of the man's head, would make the distance of the breech of the gun 5½ feet from the floor. The ball must have ranged downward four inches to the foot. That was about the position when he was killed. If you can, from all the facts, find this man innocent, well; do it; but it seems to me, beyond a doubt, that there is murder committed. If there are any doubts arising from the testimony, then give the defendant the benefit of that doubt If they attempt to show how this thing was done, they must show it to your satisfaction. And he is then entitled to no doubts. Nor are you convinced that this was an accidental killing? On the contrary, does not everything show that there was design and it was premeditated? I do not ask you, gentlemen, to convict this man because public opinion is against him. I ask you to take all the facts, and if he is innocent, acquit him. If from the testimony you think he is guilty of murder in the first degree, so find him, if guilty of any less crime, so find him If within the defendant's rights are sacred, and you are to pass upon them, you have to do so. This is a duty equally as great, and it is for you to determine whether he is innocent or guilty, and to see that the peace and order of society are protected. With these remarks, I leave the matter with you, gentlemen, hoping that right will be vindicated in the premises

REPORT OF THE GRAND JURY.—The Grand Jury made the following report yesterday afternoon and were discharged:

To the Honorable Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for the County of Multnomah:

The Grand Jury would most respectfully report, that they have diligently inquired into all cases brought before them, or that have come to their knowledge, wherein persons have been charged with the commission of offences against the laws within this county. They have found twenty-two indictments, of which one was for the crime of murder, two for assault with intent to kill, one for an assult with a dangerous weapon, five for violation of the laws relative to unlawful gaming, one for retailing spirituous liquors without a license, eight for larceny, two for adultery, and two for assault and battery. Of the cases sent into this court from justices' courts upon preliminary examinations, the Grand Jury have returned four but court endorsed "Not a true bill," for want of sufficient evidence to justify indictment. The number of important cases to be tried by the Grand Jury has been unusually large, and the term has therefore been a very laborious and protracted one.

The Grand Jury have visited the Insane Asylum, and report that that institution appears to be well conducted, everything in and about the building is in cleanliness and furniture seems to be arranged with the highest regard for the promotion of the health, comfort and general welfare of its inmates. There are ninety-two patients in the Asylum—sixty-nine males and twenty-three females

With the County Hospital the Grand Jury is not entirely satisfied as with the Insane Asylum. In the Hospital the sick and well are kept in the same room, which the Grand Jury believe to be injurious to both—tending to injure the health of the well and prevent the recovery of the sick There is certainly room for improvement in this institution The number of patients in the Hospital is seventeen, of which fifteen are males and two are females

The Grand Jury have also visited the County Jail, and find it well managed and in good condition. The cells are kept clean and well ventilated, and the inmates are as comfortable as could be expected

The Grand Jury would tender this report for publication JOHN A CARR, Foreman

Portland, Feb 27, A D 1867.

RETURN THOSE BOOKS.—The Librarian of the Portland Library requests us to say that he would be much obliged to those having books out longer than the specified time, if they would return them at their earliest opportunity.

FROM THE CARIBBEES.—The steamer Caledes arrived yesterday at 6 o'clock with an unusual number of passengers from above, but with no treasure worth mentioning

NOT YET AGREED.—Up to the hour of 10 10 last evening, the jury in the case of the State vs Kersting, had not yet agreed upon a verdict, and were still deliberating

TO SAIL.—The Continental will commence for San Francisco, on Sunday, March 3d, at 8 o'clock A M

THE STEAMSHIP "CONTINENTAL."—We take the following history and description of the steamship Continental from the Bulletin of the 21st The ocean steamship Continental of the California, Oregon and Mexico line will make her initial trip to Portland to-morrow The Continental was recently built, and was built at Philadelphia in 1865. For all but two years she was employed in the government service, which she was purchased by her present owners and entered out here April 21st 1866 with the famous Meiggs connections, leaving under the command of Capt Nye via Cape Horn in 22 steaming days, coming via Panama in 21 days [illegible] Upon her arrival she was immediately placed in the Mexican trade where she has been in excellent trade until about time ago when she was hauled off to undergo thorough repairs preparatory to being placed in the Oregon trade. These repairs are now completed, and everything about the vessel is in ex llent order The Continental is a bigantine, and built of oak and locust. Her dimensions are length, 250 feet; breadth, on deck, 40 feet; depth of hold, 17 feet; registered tonnage 1,020, [illegible] of water, 24 feet She has a full [illegible] deck, main and upper deck with a commodious deck over all. The upper deck has 16 state rooms with 100 passengers, and are large, airy and well lighted She has a direct [illegible] engine located a little aft of amidships of which [illegible] 30 inch stroke, and nominally of 40 60 horse power Her propellers it is said, can equal the speed of the Shubrick, while her model is regarded as one of the finest which has been seen in this port sharp, yet commercial Our Oregon friends will doubtless be pleased with this accession to the Coast line We understand that the Idaho, elder ship to the Montana in the Anchor line, will also make her maiden trip to Portland this week

CIRCUIT COURT—SUITRAK, JUDGE.—The following proceedings were had in the Circuit Court, Wednesday, Feb 27th

State of Oregon vs A H Kersting, indicted for murder of C H Recke, concluded the taking of evidence for the defence, argument of counsel submitted to the jury

State of Oregon vs Richard Chance, indicted for an assault upon Jane Henderson, by using a knife as a dangerous weapon pleaded guilty of an assault only, plea accepted and defendant fined $20 and costs

The Grand Jury presented indictment and report of proceedings, and were discharged.

State of Oregon vs Richard Moulton, J F McCoy appointed counsel for defendant

State of Oregon vs John Dougherty, indicted for permitting gambling devices to be set up on his premises, plea [illegible] guilty

J B Simmons vs Jacob Cline, verdict and judgment for $181 87

J B Wetson vs Estate of C N Hamilton, deceased suit dismissed without prejudice to proceedings in County Court to enforce sale of premises.

CORRECTIONS.—Dr Poppleton has called our attention to one or two errors in our report of his testimony in the case of the State vs A H Kersting The first is the language used in describing the manner in which the murdered man was shot Using the [illegible] of the Bible, the report should have said "The ball entered near the left lateral border of the occipital bone, and came out at the right eye, slightly injuring the lower lid." The report was erroneous in saying that the ball came out at the left eye. Another error was one which was purely typographical We may be [illegible] say that the ball entered the wall "six" feet from the floor It should have been two feet. While speaking of this matter, we will take occasion to say that there are doubtless other errors, but if so they are unintentional The reporter made no attempt to take down the precise words of the witnesses; only the substance of what each one testified The language of the report is that of the reporter, following the witness as closely as possible. It is due to Mr Malkey, who reported the greater part of the case, to say that Dr Poppleton's statement was taken from notes by the local editor Mr Upton reported the testimony very fully and we think very fairly, considering that he does not employ short hand

MARKET REPORTS.—Every few days we are subjected to an overhauling about some article which somebody supposes to be reported incorrectly as to price. It sometimes happens that a man in the country sees an article of produce quoted so and so, comes in with a load and finds that he cannot get so much by two or three cents per pound He falls upon the local reporter and wants to know "why he can't make the reports correct" The fact is, every article is quoted exactly as the merchants give us the figures; if we do not get the correct figures it is not our fault. In such cases as that mentioned above, the probability is that the market price has fallen between the time of the report and the time of the farmer's arrival with the produce. Or, it may be, that he has looked to the Jobbing list or to the Family Retail market, in either of which cases, he as the party at fault; he should have looked at the prices under the head of "Domestic Produce." On one thing all may rely; that they will get the quotations of every thing exactly as we get them from the merchants

A CAB OR TRAMES.—The undersigned passengers on the steamship Continental, on this her first trip from San Francisco to Portland, desire to express the satisfaction and pleasure with which we have observed the constant attention of Captain Bolles and his officers to the safety of the vessel and the comfort of the passengers, during the stormy passage just terminated, and we herewith tender him our most sincere thanks for their kind efforts in our behalf. Dated Columbia River, Oreg., Feb. 27th, 1867. H H Bigelow, R J De Hart, J H Baldwin, John Crowe, Geo Hardisty, O H Stott, J B Fellows, E S James, Chas D Cushing, W W Thompson, A Holland, Anthony Hyatt, Mrs E W Tracy, Mrs E L James, Mrs R J De Hewy, Miss [illegible], W Jr Crime, W Jr Crime, Chas H Fechheimer, Lucy May, A T Bliss, C S Storm, A Frankenthall, F Harrington, L P McDonald, and 70 others.

VERY NEAR A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Yesterday afternoon Mr Barnes, a young man employed at the Western Hotel, drove Mr. Smith's new coach down on the Exchange wharf, and when about to leave he drove under a low beam, and, not stooping low enough, was caught by the beam just back of his neck and crushed back with great force against the coach. Very fortunately the horses were stopped in time to avert a serious injury Mr Barnes was taken to the Western and soon recovered the use of his legs, temporarily lost by concussion of the spine, and in an hour or two he was comparatively comfortable, though not able to rise or walk without acute pain. He had a very narrow escape, indeed

HOUSE ROOMED.—Last Saturday night, the 23d inst, an aged man by the name of Newton Wellington, who lives about five miles below Springville, on the Willamette [illegible] sleigh, had his cabin robbed, by some man to him unknown, of coat, pants, bed and bedding, and a good rifle. It is surmised among the neighbors that it must have been done by some outlaws who needed the articles to make themselves comfortable, they being camped somewhere in the mountains above St. Helens. A pretty thorough search has been made in the vicinity, but no trace of them has yet been found.

OVERBOARD.—A man named Alexander, a drayman, standing on the wharf at the time of the landing of the Continental last evening, was crowded off the wharf into the river, but was shortly rescued by means of a rope, thrown to him Beyond a thorough wetting and the loss of his hat, he received no injury. [A few more accidents of this kind may induce somebody to provide railings along the edge of the wharf

IN WANT OF CLOTHES.—The house of Capt. Adams, near St Helens, was entered last Friday night, during the Captain's absence and his wardrobe relieved of a suit of clothing. The Captain is of the opinion that this last raid on his property is not connected in any manner with the recent acts of vandalism perpetrated on his premises; but that some hunter living in the mountains got the clothes.

THE THEATER.—Among the audience last night were a considerable number of ladies They can venture out with perfect safety, as the manager carefully excludes all vulgarity from the performances. The bill was well rendered Miss Soledad, O'Niel, Delevan, Sprague and Graham were particularly good An entire new programme will be offered to-night.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.—We acknowledge the receipt of complimentary tickets to the Philharmonic Concert, Friday evening, March 1st, together with copies of the programme. The entertainment promises, from what we can gather, to be a musical treat somewhat superior to anything ever offered in Portland.

PROF BLAKE.—Prof W. P. Blake, of California, arrived last evening by the Continental. He comes to obtain information relative to the mineral resources, etc., of Oregon, and will visit several parts of the State during his stay Prof Blake has a high reputation as a gentleman of scientific attainments.

MR HALLORAN'S APPOINTMENT.—We learn that Mr. Halloran, late of the Standard, has received official notice of his appointment to a 2d Lieutenancy in the regular army. We have no information as to the regiment to which he is assigned He is expected to go below on the steamer now in port.

OREGON APPLES IN SAN FRANCISCO.—The Bulletin of the 22d has the following: "Apples are scarce and quotable at $1 50@3 per box Several invoices are expected early next week from Oregon, which will meet with ready sale. Years retail by the box at $2@3 50

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per Alert, Wednesday, Feb 27th: 165 boxes apples, 787 qr sks flour, 6 boxes produce, 384 sks feed, 63 sks bran, 9 dressed hogs, 1 case vitriol, 7 bales paper, 47 kegs, 30 sks oats, 2 boxes eggs

Let it Pass

Be not too swift to take offense
Let it pass
Anger is a foe to sense
Let it pass
Brood not darkly o'er a wrong
Which will d supp ar ere long
Rather sing, this cheery song—
Let it pass
Let it pass!

Strife corrodes the purest mind
Let it pass
As the unregarded wind
Let it pass
Any vulgar scale that live
May celebrate will out reprove
'Tis the noble who forgive
Let it pass!
Let it pass

Echo not an angry word
Let it pass!
Think how often you have erred
Let it pass
Since our days must pass away
Like the dew drops on the spray
Wherefore should our sorrows stay!
Let them pass
Let them pass

If for good you've taken ill,
Let it pass!
Oh be kind and gentle still
Let it pass
Time at last makes all things straight
Let us not resent, but wait
And our triumphs shall be great
Let it pass!
Let it pass!

Bid your anger to depart
Let it pass!
Lay these homely words to heart;
Let it pass!
Follow not the giddy throng
Better to be wronged than wrong
Therefore sing the cheery song—
Let it pass!
Let it pass

Wild Bill's Story

It was in '61, when I guided a detachment of cavalry who were comin' in from Camp Floyd We had nearly reached the Kansas line and were in South Nebraska, when one afternoon I went out of camp to go to the cabin of an old friend of mine, a Mrs Waltman I took only one of my revolvers with me, for although the war had broke out I didn't think it necessary to carry both my pistols and in ord'nary scrimmages, one is better than a dozen, if you shoot straight I saw some wild turkeys on the road as I was goin' down and popped one of 'em over, thinkin' he'd be just the thing for supper

Well, I rode up to Mrs Waltman's, jumped off my horse and went into the cabin, which is like most of the cabins on the prairer, with only one room, and that had two doors, one opening in front and t'other on a yard like

"How are you, Mrs Waltman?" said I, feeling as jolly as you please

The minute she saw me, she turned as white as a sheet, and screamed "Is that you, Bill?" Oh, my God, they will kill you! Run! run! They will kill you!'

'Who's a goin to kill me!" said I "There's two can play at that game"

"It's M'Kandlus and his gang There's ten of them, and you've no chance, They've jes gone down the road to the corn rack They came up here only five minutes ago. M'Kandlus was dragging poor Parson Shipley on the ground with a lariat round his neck The preacher was most dead with choking and the horses stamping on him M'Kandlus knows yer bringing in that party of Yankee cavalry, and he swears he'll cut your heart out. Run! Bill, run! But it's too late they're coming up the lane"

While she was talkin', I remembered I had but one revolver, and a load gone out of that. On the table there was a horn of powder and some little bars of lead. I poured some powder into the empty chamber and rammed the lead after it by hammering the barrel on the table, and had just capped the pistol when I heard M'Kandlus shout

"There's that d—d Yank Wild Bill's horse, he's here, and we'll skin him alive"

If I had thought of runnin' before it was too late now, and the house was my best hold—a sort of fortress, like. I never thought I should leave that room alive

The scout stopped in his story, rose from his seat, and strode backward and forward in a state of great excitement

"I tell you what it is, Kurnel," he resumed, after a while, 'I don't mind a scrimmage with three fellers round here Shoot one or two of them, and the rest run away But all of M'Kandlus's gang were reckless, blood thirsty devils, who would fight as long as they had strength to pull a trigger I have been in tight places, but that's one of the few times I said my prayers.

"Surround the house and give him up quarter," yelled M'Kandlus When I heard that I felt as quiet and cool as if I was a goin' to church I looked around the room and saw a Hawkins rifle hanging over the bed.

"Is that loaded?" said I to Mrs Waltman

"Yes," the poor thing whispered. She was so frightened she couldn't speak aloud

"Are you sure!" said I, as I jumped to the bed and caught it from its hooks Although my eye did not leave the door, I could see she nodded yes again. I put the revolver in the bed and just then M'Kandlus poked his nose inside the door way, but jumped back when he saw me with a rifle in my hand

"Come in here, you cowardly dog" I shouted "Come in here and fight me!"

M'Kandlus was no coward, if he was a bully He jumped inside the room with his gun levelled to shoot, but he was not quick enough My rifle ball went through his heart. He fell back outside the house, where he was found afterwards holding tight to his rifle, which had fallen over his head

His disappearance was followed by a yell from the gang, and then there was a dead silence I put down the rifle and took the revolver and I said to myself, "Only six shots, and nine men to kill Save your powder, Bill, for the death hug's a-comin'" I don't know why it was Kurnel continued Bill, looking at me inquiringly, but at that moment things seemed clear and sharp, I could think strong

There were a few seconds of that awful silence, and then the ruffians came rushing in at both doors How wild they looked, with their red, drunken faces and inflamed eyes, shouting and cussing But I never aimed more deliberately in my life

One—two—three four, and four men fell dead That didn't stop the rest Two of them fired their bird guns at me And then I felt a stag run all over me The room was full of smoke Two got in close to me, their eyes glaring out of the clouds. One I knocked down with my fist You are out of the way for awhile, I thought The second I shot dead The other three clutched me and crowded me on to the bed I fought hard I broke with my hand one man's arm He had his fingers round my throat. Before I could get to my feet I was struck across the breast with the stock of a rifle, and I felt the blood rushing out of my nose and mouth Then I got ugly, and I remember that I got hold of a knife, and then it was all cloudy like and I was wild, and I struck savage blows, following the devils up from one side to the other of the room and into the corners, striking and slashing until I knew that every one was dead

All of a sudden it seemed as if my heart was on fire I was bleeding everywhere I rushed out to the well and drank from the bucket, and then tumbled down in a faint.

Breathless with the intense interest with which I had followed the strange story, all the more thrilling and weird when its hero, seeming to live over again the bloody events of that day gave way to its terrible spirit with wild savage gestures, I saw then—what my scrutiny of the morning had failed to discover—the tiger which lay concealed beneath the gentle exterior

"You must have been hurt almost to death," I said

"There were 11 buckshot in me I carry some of them now I was cut in 13 places All of them bad enough to have let out the life of a man But that blessed old Dr Mills pulled me safe through it after a hod siege of many a long week"

"That prayer of yours Bill, may have been more potent for your safety than you think You should thank God for your deliverance

"To tell the truth, Kurnel responded the scout with a certain solemnity in his grave face I don't talk about such things to the people round here but I allers feel sort of thankful when I get out of a bad scrape"

THE RADICAL PARTY OF KENTUCKY — The Frankfort correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial says 'The late ballots for Senator have convinced the most doubting that the great Rad ical party North has a 'local habitation and a name' in the most Conservative of all States But the world moves on notwithstanding the determination of Kentuckians not to secede, and Radicalism, (which here is a synonymous term for Unionism) has increased a hundred fold We are now a living party, and under the thorough and complete organization of this winter, we will make such a fight next summer as will open the eyes of those who have heretofore been of little faith We propose to set up housekeeping on our own book, and cut loose from all entangling alliances. If we go down we will do it with our own colors flying, and in our own craft There was much talk of 'fusion' etc in the beginning but to the credit of the party not a single man has left our ranks"

The Wastuckna Wagon Road

The following article has been sent us for publication by Capt Hazzard Stevens, who vouches for the accuracy of its statements The article originally appeared in the Walla Walla States man

The Wastuckna wagon road is the direct route from Wallula to the Cow Creek House at the forks of the Multnomah and Colville roads The road crosses Snake river at Jim Ford's Island about half way between Palouse Ferry and the mouth A wire rope ferry has just been put on and is now ready to cross teams and trains The whole distance is fifty eight miles and the general course north thirty degrees east From Wallula the road follows the basin of the Columbia three miles thence leaving the river at an angle of thirty degrees it strikes across the prairie in a direct line to Fish Hook Bend on Snake river twelve or fifteen miles from Wallula There is a well beaten wagon track along the Columbia and for five miles after leaving that stream the road follows a plain traveled Indian trail The ground is unusually level The greatest and in fact only obstacle on the whole route is encountered immediately on leaving the Columbia in the shape of nearly four miles of sand None of this however is drifted and not a great deal deep or heavy sand Pack trains will have no difficulty in traveling it The remainder of the distance to Fish Hook Bend is over a level bunch grass road or plateau

From the Bend to the Ferry a distance of ten miles, the road follows the general course of the river For the first five miles it crosses a broad plateau cutting off a great bend of the Snake including Anchor Canyon then strikes the stream again follows along its bank five miles farther to the Ferry The old Indian trail is up and down the river take the same course, so that pack trains will find the road already broken Cross ng the river by the ferry at Jim Ford's Island the road surmounts a high hill by means of a long gently sloping canyon, and strikes across the country to Wastuckna lake fifteen miles This is the long est distance between water on the entire route, and the hill at the river is the highest But as gradual and easy is the ascent that loaded teams can pull up it without doubling and once at the summit there are no more hills to ascend between that and Cow Creek

Wastuckna Lake lies deep in a remarkable coulee, or canyon that commencing near the junction of Cow Creek with the Palouse extends in a southwest course to the lake, and thence bears nearly westward to the Columbia river, debouching some fifteen miles from the Yakima It has served the Indians as a great thoroughfare between the Palouse and Columbia, and as traveled through its whole length by their trail four abreast The breadth of the coulee is from half a mile to a mile, its depth is from five to eight hundred feet below the general level of the country Its floor is perfectly level and covered with the finest bunch grass It resembles though on a small scale the bed of Snake River supposing the waters of that stream were transformed to a bunch grass plain At several points in its course copious springs of pure water gush out of the earth and after flowing some distance sinks again into the ground One of the largest of these feeds Wastuckna Lake which gives its name to the road This lake is two miles long by half a mile wide The water is perfectly fresh and pure In the fall thousands of ducks and geese frequent its shores Passing around the lake the road follows the Indian trail along the coulee for eight miles to a second spring This bursts out of the ground with a volume equal in mining terms, to thirty inches of water, or enough to supply an army of ten thousand men, and after flowing a quarter of a mile it sinks The banks are densely fringed with willows, some of them of tolerable size Just beyond the spring the road leaves the coulee and follows the branch canyon to the left for four miles, gently ascending all the way until it runs out upon the extensive plain on the west bank of Cow Creek Thence it crosses a corner of the plain, four miles, descends into the Valley of the creek and intersects the forks of the Colville and Mullan roads; not half a mile from Cow Creek House The distance from the spring to the junction is eight miles

The following table gives the distances between camps or water places

From Wallula up the Columbia	3 miles
" to Fish Hook Bend	12 "
" to the Ferry	10 "
" to Wastuckna Lake	15 "
" to the Spring	8 "
" to Cow Creek	8 "
Length of the Lake	2 "
Total distance	58 "

The distance from Wallula to Cow Creek House by the old roads are for pack trains via

Touchet	85 miles.
For wagons, via Walla Walla	100

Hence the Wastuckna road effects a saving of from 25 to 50 miles over old roads But the gain in point of distance is not greater than that as regards water and hills On all the old roads a drave of from twenty to twenty six miles without water must be encountered between the Touchet and Snake River A glance at the above table shows that the longest distance without water on the new road is but fifteen miles, and that the watering places are so situated that trains, or teams, can make the distance in four, five or six drives as may be convenient, without overdriving in the one case or lying idle in the other On the old roads high and steep hills have to be surmounted in crossing the valleys of the Touchet Tucanon, Snake and Palouse. But the new road turns all these streams except the Snake, leaving them to the right From Wallula to the Ferry there are but three hills to descend and two to ascend, none difficult From the Ferry to Cow Creek there is but one hill to ascend, that immediately on the Snake, and all that have examined it unite in the opinion that loaded wagons could be taken up without doubling teams At Wastuckna Lake and at Cow Creek are hills to descend, both of them easy There are the greatest abundance of grass on the whole route and plenty of wood at all dumping places except that at the Lake Spring the wood is small Several points require grading more or less, before the road is opened for wagons The wire rope ordered was transported in a wagon over the road to the Ferry, and an empty wagon went through and reached the road between the river and Cow Creek Empty wagons would have no difficulty in traversing the entire route, and it is expected to have the road ready for loaded ones as soon as they begin to move out For pack trains everything is now complete The road follows the old trails and roads fully half its distance and a plow furrow renders the remainder plain to the most heedless traveler

The point at which the ferry is located Jim Ford's Island has been a favorite crossing place of the Indians Their broad trails from Walla Walla to the Yakima, Priest's Rapids and other resorts on the Columbia cross here These trails cross Dry Creek about six miles from Walla Walla at or near Estis' place, and the Touchet at Knight's The distance to the Island Ferry is thirty two miles the route practicable to wagons which have frequently been taken over it by the Ferriers lying on the Touchet The only place where the wagon track leaves the trail is plainly marked From Walla Walla to Cow Creek, by the Island Ferry the distance is a few miles shorter than by Palouse Ferry, and the long drave without water is avoided

Political Intolerance in the South

The following article from the Missouri Travel published at Springfield Ill., shows to what an extent the spirit of political intolerance is carried in the South, not only governing social and business relations, but dissolving even the close fraternal bonds of an Order whose ties are proverbially strong and sacred

The most noted case of steadfast adhesion to the cause of the Union during the late lamentable revolt was that of the illustrious philosopher, Albert G Mackey, M D, of Charleston S C Throughout the entire contest he remained at his post looking out and caring for sick and wounded Masons of both parties until both means and credit were exhausted Several Masons in Illinois have testified to us in person of the goodness and perseverence of Brother Mackay whom no discouragements could overcome and who persevered in his mission of physician comforter, adviser and ammunensis Others have told similar tales, until our brother is everywhere regarded as a true Good Samaritan During all this time and until now he has held the position as Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of South Carolina No Grand Lodge has ever more thoroughly exclaimed political and as far an influence from its union as has the Grand Lodge of the Palmetto State Yet in spite of the efforts and sympathy of Governor Orr Grand Master and all the grand officers Dr Mackey has been rejected from the office of Grand Secretary for the avowed reason that he is a Union man As such reasons have influenced a single Grand Lodge in our knowledge before Men of various political views fill the offices in all our Northern Masonic bodies The venerated O'Sullivan, an outspoken Union man was unanimously elected every time The question has not in the least affected the Grand Secretaries of Kentucky or Tennessee These three brethren O'Sullivan, McCorkle and Fuller hold as variant views have attended to their Masonic duties—they cared for the sick and dying Mason for the Mason's wounded son they cheered the widow and comforted the mother without regard to locality class condition, or political views and their brethren have said 'Well done good and faithful servants'

Mackey—always kind, always loving and tender always charitable—persisted in doing good without giving offence—with eloquence and labor unsurpassed by none—has been selected Grand Chaplain His successor in the Grand Chapter of South Carolina in February 1861, said that if a wounded Yankee soldier, even if he were a Mason should make any Masonic appeal to him no matter how strong on the field of battle he would cut him down And this same man with others appealed to their brethren in the North for aid for their dismantled lodges in the city of Columbia and got it under able and The question is not whether a Democrat Republican Unionist Conservative or Southern Rights man may or may not be elected to Masonic office All to the possibility of such a question and Masonry will become all that its enemies desire Masonic attainments good character and business qualifications are the only considerations which should enter into Masonic elections Other considerations should never be thought of, much less mentioned and acted on

GOOD FOR ANDREW.—When Governor Andrew sent the Massachusetts girls to the Pacific coast to supply the want of femininity in that region he said that they need not marry immediately but that they could find plenty to do in teaching the little children Anna Dickinson can't teach She says Where the little children were to come from out of a population of ten thousand men was more than she could imagine but he thought that probably Governor Andrew being a man, might be able to do so

Fountain of Life!
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER!

IN EVERY PROGRESSIVE SCIENCE PERIODS ARRIVE when a new direction is imparted to its course These epochs proceed from some facts revealing a light which changes the whole aspect of the Science The present is an epoch of this kind, and this Great Remedy now offered to the public, in connection with the theory on which it is based is destined to effect an entire revolution in the treatment of the diseases of

SCROFULA AND KING'S EVIL!

by eradicating the disease entirely from the blood The FOUNTAIN OF LIFE is composed entirely of vegetable extracts it contains no Mercury or other mineral substance

The Proprietor and Discoverer of this Sovereign Remedy CHALLENGES THE WORLD to furnish anything from the days of Æsculapius down to the present time, in the arcana of Medical science, which can vie with or excel the intrinsic properties of this Great Blood Purifier Its value has been tested with the most complete effect in the most obstinate cases of Scrofula, that baffled the skill of the most emi nent physicians in the world No matter what form the dreadful disease of SCROFULA and KING'S EVIL may have assumed, it can in no way be more surely and certainly arrested in its progress than by HENLEY'S GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER Thousands have been swept into their graves who had they made a timely use of the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE, might now be enjoying the blessings of life and health It requires an article of real merit and intrinsic value to endure itself During the stern ordeal of public experiment the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE has stood the test trial, and not been found wanting

DR HENLEY Guarantees to CURE any case of SCROFULA or KING'S EVIL in the world and eradicate the disease entirely from the system or no charge made —provided they will secure him his pay when they are cured

FOR REFERENCE

I would refer you to L L Peck of Portland, Oregon, and to others of whom as to what a miraculous effect I had in about 1 use in cases that had baffled the skill of physicians for years.
